

HELEN BUMPUS GALLERY

Art World

Drawings in a delightful setting

ELEGANT DOME of the Helen Bumpus Gallery of the Duxbury Free Library. The gallery, which opened in December of 1968, is the original library building. An interesting feature of the gallery is that in March the town meeting voted to pay for its operation and salaries. Currently on view are drawings and paintings by Jack Kramer of Brookline, professor of art at the School of Fine and Applied Art, Boston University, where he teaches advanced figure drawing and human anatomy. The drawing "Model and Mirror" (right) is part of the exhibit being held through May 4 in conjunction with the publication of Mr. Kramer's book, "Human Anatomy and Figure Drawing." (Photo of the gallery by Everett A. Tatreau.

— ELLEN DYER